A PROFESSIONAL ARCHITECTURAL CORPORATION

Chris Pitre, 2004 graduate of Delgado Community College's Architectural Engineering Technology (now called the Architectural/Design Construction Technology) Program, works with Scairono Martinez Architects, a full service New Orleans architectural firm. In the years since his graduation, Mr. Pitre has contributed to the success of a variety of projects for Scairono Martinez, from small residential designs to a $17 million military facility and an $83 million resort hotel. Architect Barry Scairono affirms that Mr. Pitre is a valuable asset to the corporation.

"(Chris) has been able to tackle every professional challenge placed before him with flying colors," said Mr. Scairono. "Ron Martinez and I count on him in many ways, and we are never disappointed. We often wish we had a few more associates like Chris," he added.

Mr. Scairono also had praise for the Architectural Engineering Technology (now called the Architectural/Design Construction Technology) Program: "Delgado Community College can be very proud of graduates like Chris Pitre. The Architecture profession has a great need for high quality workers with strong educations. It is wonderful that you keep up with your graduates and use their experiences to improve your program. Keep up the good work."
